

Web and Multimedia Development

Do you remember those days when TV and newspapers were the only source of information?

Remember, when printed brochures and business cards were the only kind of presentation for businesses?

Do you remember when our families used to keep thousands of pictures in shoe boxes and glued them onto the pages of their photo albums?

Those days are gone!

Today every gas station has its own website.

People save their digital pictures on DVD's, where content presented in interactive photo albums.

Grand kids publish pictures of their graduation party on the web and email their grand parents direct links to the web albums created.

Nowadays businesses, along with traditional brochures and corporate kits, can not live without web sites, digital presentations, interactive kiosks, PowerPoint presentations and digital libraries.
